Long ago, there was a little boy named Pan. He was the youngest child in the family.

One day, his father brought home a big basket of pears. He put the basket on the table and told his children that they could each take a pear to eat. All the children except Pan began to choose the biggest and the nicest pear.

When his father saw this, he was surprised and asked, "Pan, why don't you choose a big pear for yourself?" The little boy answered, "Let my brothers and sisters have the bigger pears because they are bigger than I am. I will take the smallest one."

His father was very pleased with the reply because Pan was then only five years old. He knew then that his son would one day grow up to be a great man.
